

Student Review Contest

NOV. 1-DEC. 6, 2023

Do you like sharing your opinion with others? Do you have strong reactions to books, movies, restaurants or fashion? Are you a foodie or a gamer?

If so, this contest is for you. We invite you to play critic and write an original review for our Ninth Annual Student Review Contest.

What can you choose to review? Anything that fits into a category of creative expression that The New York Times covers – from architecture to music.

And new this year: Whatever you choose to review must have debuted in 2023. That means not that you watched a movie, read a book or heard an album for the first time this year, but that the work premiered in 2023.

What Can I Review?

You must review something that is new in 2023 and that fits into one of the categories of creative expression that The Times reviews:

books	theater	dance	hotels
music	TV shows	art	technology
movies	fashion	restaurants	video games
podcasts	architecture	comedy	cars

Contest Rules

- The contest is open to students ages 13 to 19 in middle or high school anywhere in the world.
- Each participant can submit one original review of 450 words or fewer.
- Whatever you choose to review, it should be new this year and you should experience it yourself.
- Submissions are due Dec. 6, 2023 at 11:59 p.m. Pacific.

Visit the contest page to see the full guidelines and submit.